Exterior

There's just no mistaking it. The Beetle is perhaps the most-recognised car in the world. The original's classic lines have been updated for the 21st century; its stance is lower, more poised and more confident. The bonnet's curve recalls classic coupés. The steeply raked front windscreen, long roofline and elegantly crafted rear spoiler complete an unmistakable silhouette.

But there's more to it, than just the silhouette. The classic round headlights are pure 'Beetle', and feature automatic headlight activation and daytime driving lights. Not only do they perfectly compliment the rest of the car's appearance, they provide plenty of light when needed. Front fog lights with static cornering lights are cleverly merged into the lower bumper; improve visibility when conditions are less than perfect.

Good design is subtle and car design is an art, which is why the Beetle includes a number of artfully placed chrome highlights. These include a horizontal strip through the lower air intake and strips along the door and window sills. They draw the eye across the car, emphasising its clean lines and distinctive silhouette. Parking distance sensors and Rear View Camera* make parking the Beetle in tight spaces a breeze. Finished with 17-inch 'Rotor' alloy wheels as standard; the Beetle exudes a personality unlike any other.

Interior

The Beetle's interior recalls that of its illustrious ancestor, yet its distinct modern touches will surprise and delight even the most fastidious owner. From the body colour elements (dash panel, door panels and steering wheel hub) to the leather-clad, multi-function steering wheel, the interior is a harmonious representation of classic and modern.

The Beetle's roofline offers head space for rear-seat passengers. The height adjustable seats are available in Comfort cloth or optional Vienna leather appointed seat upholstery*. Controls fall neatly to hand; the rear seats split and fold to optimise your storage options; and the large hatch makes getting your gear in and out a breeze. Thus, the Beetle combines comfort and ergonomics in its unique design.

Reminiscent of Beetles' past, the well-loved retro glove box, large round instrument cluster, dashboard storage box and roofline assist straps; are nostalgic additions to the 21st century Beetle. The Beetle's chrome highlights have been precisely located to provide the optimal balance between utility and style. The Beetle's dual zone automatic climate control air conditioning system, will keep you (and your passengers) warm in winter and cool in summer. The Beetle cleverly integrates the new Composition Media Audio System, featuring a 6.5" capacitive touchscreen display, CD player, Bluetooth® phone connectivity and Volkswagen's newest innovation; App-Connect[^]. App-Connect uses Apple CarPlay®, Android Auto™ and MirrorLink® software to seamlessly integrate your smartphone with the Beetle, enabling access to a select range of smartphone applications.
